MCMXCVII

Hello. My name is Snow White. I'm glad to meet you.

These are my friends the Seven Dwarfs. I keep house for them.

Have I always lived in this little cottage?
No. Let me tell you all about myself.

I grew up in a castle with my stepmother, the queen. She was very beautiful, but she had little time for me.

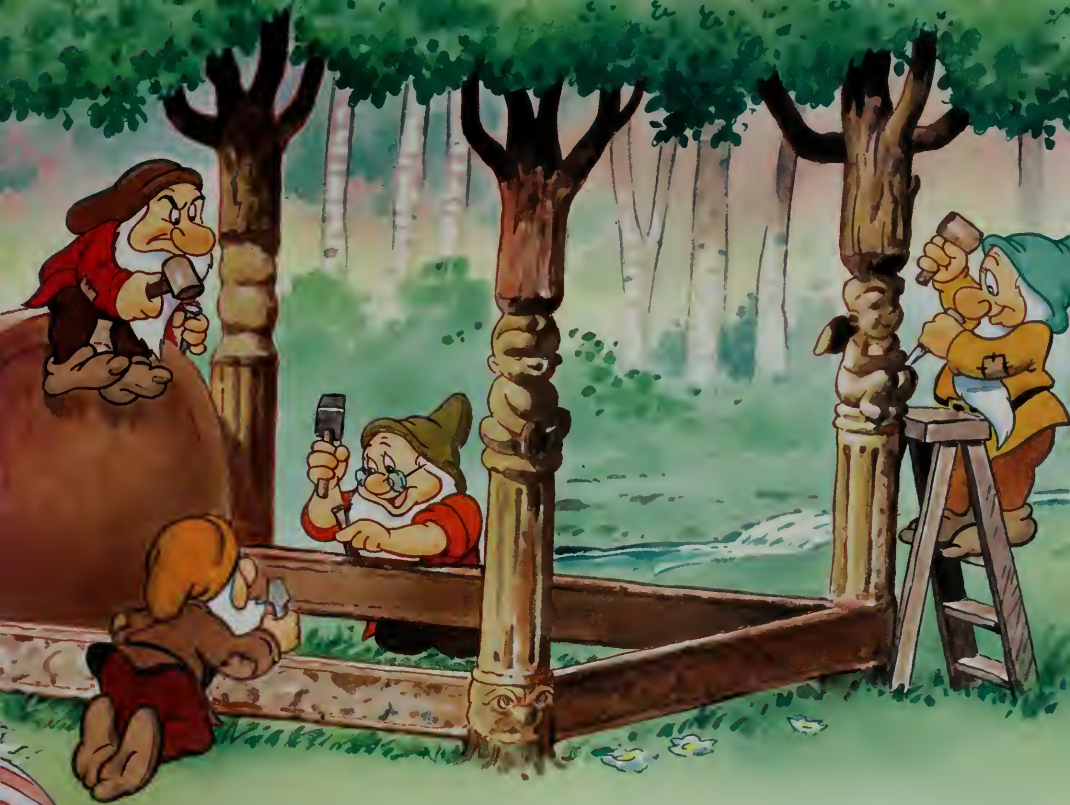

My stepmother made me work very hard. But even as I did my chores, the bluebirds always made me happy.

One day I was taken from the castle and left alone in the woods. Thank goodness I soon found the dwarfs. They are kind. I share their little house.

They have even started making a beautiful bed for me. Doc and Sneezzy are carving the sides while Grumpy finishes the headboard. Bashful is working on the cherubs. Happy is sewing the mattress, and Dopey is gathering the stuffing. Sleepy couldn't wait to test the mattress.

Every day I try in some way to pay the dwarfs back for their kindness.

I look for Doc's glasses.

I find a clean hankie for Sneezy.

I listen to Happy
practice his yodeling.

And I let Grumpy tell me
one more time, "Remember,
don't open the door to strangers!"

Now let me tell you about some of the things I like best.
My favorite color is blue. It is the color of the birds I love.

Would you like to know which song I always sing?
I sing the one that says a prince will come someday and find me.

Ask me about my favorite game, and I will say hide-and-seek. The dwarfs like to hide, but they don't like to be found!

My favorite musical instrument is the concertina. I asked Bashful to teach me how to play it. He plays very well.

When the dwarfs are away at work in the diamond mine, I have the animals for company. They stay with me while I make wreaths of meadow flowers. Once I thought the doe might want a wreath, too, but she didn't like it.

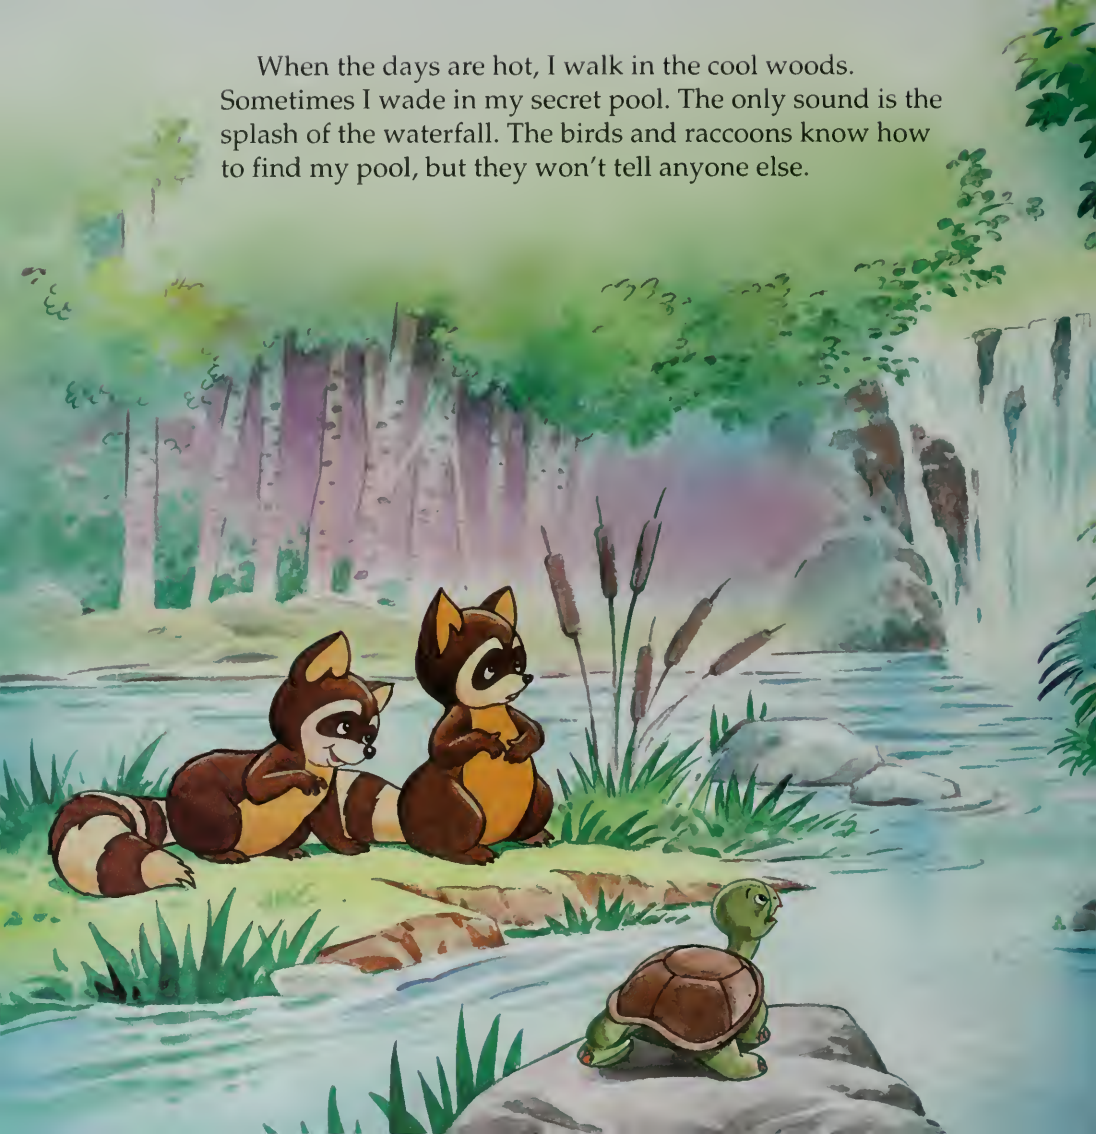

When the berries are ripe, I go to the garden early in the morning and pick some for pies. Sneezy likes to come with me, but some days it's better if he stays out of the garden.

Sometimes the dwarfs take me for a ride in their little cart. They pretend they are going to work and sing.

When the days are hot, I walk in the cool woods.
Sometimes I wade in my secret pool. The only sound is the splash of the waterfall. The birds and raccoons know how to find my pool, but they won't tell anyone else.

I like to draw. When the dwarfs found out,
they asked me to draw a picture of each of them.

Sneezy sat very still. He didn't sneeze once.

Dopey brought me flowers,
and I put them in the picture.

Grumpy wouldn't sit for me, so I drew a picture of him—from the back!

Sleepy was hard to draw because he couldn't stop yawning.

Doc and Bashful wanted me to draw them as they set off to work. Bashful felt shy. He hid behind Doc.

After I drew Happy's picture, he drew one of me!

When I finished all the pictures, the dwarfs gave me a wonderful gift. It was a headband studded with jewels.

Oh, my. It's getting late now and I must fix dinner. Before I go, here is a little recipe for happiness from me to you:

*If the day is rainy or the night is long,
Stir in a smile and add a song.*

Good-bye. Hope to see you again soon.
